“ I met Amanda when she was a senior at Klein high, I was a barista at the Starbucks across the street. I had just moved to Houston from Louisiana and she quickly became one of my first friends. She would sit at the bar with her friends, or by herself, and we would joke back and forth. She was such a bright star in my life. We had many slumber parties as the years passed, one time we spent no less than three hours trying to learn a dance we saw on TV, cracking up the whole time. We messaged each other often, and one of our last conversations was about how excited we were to hang out in 2019. I'm comforted that she knew she was loved but heartbroken she left us so early. She was truly beautiful, intelligent, funny, and good-natured. I was lucky to know her.
